

I don't pretend to understand all I've heard about the LPFM proposal at the FCC. But I do understand that programs that use the current FM translator service, such as K-Love, play a big role in our community. My family listens almost exclusively to K-Love for its clean content, uplifting messages, and news. My kids scream for us to turn on K-Love in the car. You can't imagine how good that makes me feel, to know they are requesting something that is smut-free and continually provides a positive message to them. There is great value in this type of national programming. Thank you for considering my comments.
